

Decorate Your Space

O'Dells 13

Above Left, Ian Schlanger '02 works with limited space to decorate his single with tapestries and an Animal House poster (among others) and converts his bed into a couch for maximum hanging out space. Above right, Kathy Stearns '02 also makes her statement with tapestries and posters, but throws in a stuffed cow and tiger blanket to make her single "home".

One never grows out of expressing themselves through their decor, as Professor Iva Deutchman of the Political Science department demonstrates with her door, at right. As one would expect from a Poli Sci professor, her bumper stickers, cartoons, and articles show off her pride in her political views to any student or fellow faculty member that stops by her Trinity Hall office.

Trinity 206

Rees 362

Ally Gualtieri '03 shows off her HWS pride with her purple-and-green themed single in Rees Hall. Impressionist prints, Washington DC posters, Dennys' menu and photos of friends and good times combine with strings of lanterns and icicle lights to provide a welcoming atmosphere. At right, her study corner boasts a comfy chair and a close place to put books.

Emerson 110

The boys of Emerson 110 have a definite testosterone influence on their decor. Above left, Ben Kenna '03 makes his major statement with movie posters. Below, the common room shows off various beer and liquor advertisements. Their maleness is even reflected in small details such as the light switch in the common room, above right. Even the door to Ben Kenna's '03 and Andrew Meehan's '03 room, at right, is covered with memorabilia such as pictures of their friends and special artifacts.

You may be what you eat, but we at the Herald believe that how you live is also pretty indicative of who you are. First-years, take note: how you decorate your personal space also says a lot about you. With that in mind, we devote two precious pages to the interior design of HWS students. What do you want your dorm to say about you? Here are the responses of several willing students who kindly allowed us to photograph their rooms, with the disclaimer, of course "well, it's kind of messy..." We understand.

photos, captions, and blurb by Ally Gualtieri

Kris Grahame '04 and Brian Thompson '04, of the Geneva Hall Triple, love to show off their entertainment center containing more electronic equipment than any college sophomores have a right to claim at below. At right, their decor is completed with Aerosmith and Kevin Smith posters, Hobart pride, and the requisite beer and liquor paraphernalia.

Dane Miller '03, the RA for the Art and Architecture theme house, shows off her excitement about visiting Vietnam next semester with photos and news clippings above. At left, her shutters evolve into creative picture frames for photos of friends and family. Below, Madelaine Mayer '02's single shows off her artistic side, with art and music posters, bedspread, and leopard-print pillow adding lots of color to her living space. First-years, take note!

Geneva

Art and Architecture House

